

Weirdest house ever

That was a very strange place, everything in that house was upside down and quite old. There was some footprints on the ceiling, and most of the furniture was broken, but the most strange part in the house was the living room. There, all furniture was divided in two parts; one part was on the floor and the other part was on the ceiling. All the walls were painted in white, including the floor and the ceiling, which made the house even weirder.

It's clear this house was enchanted or something like that, it wasn't a regular house for sure!
